GENERAL STRIKE IN BRITAIN CALLED BY RAIL WORKERS

Yesterday Noon Was Fixed As Time Of Walkout In Ultimatum

REPLY IS ISSUED

Government Holds Action Of Union Executive Was Not Justified

SEES TRADE HURT

Effect Of Wage Advance Would Be Increase Of Freight Rates

(Reuter's Service)

London, Sept. 24.—In spite of the Government's statement Mr. J. H. Thomas announces tonight that the National Union of Railwaymen has unanimously decided to strike at noon on September 26 unless a new offer is received from the Government.

Shortly after the publication of the Railwaymen's ultimatum, the Government issued a reply that the action of the Railwaymen's Executive in delivering an ultimatum on the very day on which the powers of the Board of Trade were transferred to the Ministry of Transport, appeared quite unjustified. The Government stated that an advance in wages applied to the whole railway staff would involve an additional permanent expenditure, which could only be met by an advance in goods' rates of probably over 50 percent, which in turn would naturally have to be borne by the community, and the country's export trade.

Warning Not Heeded

London, September 24.—Labor correspondents consider Mr. J. H. Thomas' warning of coming railway trouble should not be taken too seriously. They point out that the already protracted negotiations with the Railway Executive have still two months to run and that with Government help it is practically certain that a settlement will be reached.

Mr. Thomas' warning is regarded as addressed particularly to the Labor Extremists who are trying to force a strike. Mr. Bromley, secretary of the Locomotive Engineers Society, said yesterday evening that he was not aware that there was any crisis.

Mr. J. H. Thomas the Railwaymens leader announces that an ultimatum has been presented to the Government on the railway crisis, which will expire at noon tomorrow.

General Lu Departs For Post At Hangchow

Report Wang Yi-tang Also Was Leaving Shanghai Meets With Denial

General Lu Yung-hsiang, formerly Shanghai Defense Commissioner, left for Hangchow yesterday morning for his new post as Tuchun of Chekiang. The arsenal and Nantao police bands were in attendance and a large number of local officials were present to bid him farewell.

General Lu's departure was responsible for a report earlier in the day that Mr. Wang Yi-tang, the Northern delegate, also left with General Lu, but it was officially denied. General Lu was accompanied by his secretary, Mr. Sun Chi-ching.

The departure of General Lu for Hangchow, however, is conclusive that there is no prospect for immediate peace. General Lu has purposely journeyed from his Hangchow post to Shanghai to make arrangements for the conference, but the opposition of the local organisations and southern leaders has doomed the peace prospects and General Lu believed that he could serve the country better by taking care of his own business.

Suicide Is Verdict At Hadley Inquest

Sister Of Dead Man Says Deed Was Result Of Unhappy Marriage

A formal verdict of suicide was returned yesterday afternoon by Magistrate G. W. King at the conclusion of the inquest into the cause of the death of Mr. Thomas Henry Hadley, who shot himself on Monday night aboard the Hsin Peking en route to Ningpo.

A sister of the deceased, Annie Elizabeth Swensen, asserted on the witness stand that the suicide was the result of an unhappy marriage. He had threatened to take his life before, his sister told the court. Mrs. Catherine Hadley, the widow, could give no motive for the deed. She suggested that financial difficulties might have been the cause. Both Mr. Hadley's wife and sister received farewell letters which read that he would be dead by the time there were received.

That Mr. Hadley held the pistol in his mouth when he fired the fatal shot was established by Dr. Norman Hay Bolton, who examined the body when it was brought from Ningpo. There were no marks of violence on the body. The physician expressed the opinion that the wound was self inflicted. Mr. Hadley borrowed the revolver with which he shot himself, Detective Sergeant Yorke testified.

Officers of the Hsin Peking gave evidence of the finding of the body and its recognition. Captain Andrew Stock, Second Engineer J. H. Sephen, and Chief Officer Robert George Butcher testified. The latter said that Mr. Hadley purchased a round-trip ticket. Deceased was last seen at nine o'clock by Li Ah-ngauh, the number one boy on the steamer. The body was found by the second engineer three hours later.

RIOTING DEVELOPS IN STEEL STRIKE IN CITIES IN U.S.

Serious Outbreaks Occur In Pittsburg, Buffalo And Newcastle

STATE TROOPS OUT

Labor Said To Be Gaining In West But Not In Eastern Centers

INQUIRY ORDERED

Steel Corporation Head And Chief Of Workers Called By Senate

(Reuter's Service)

New York, September 24.—There was ugly rioting at Newcastle, Pittsburg, Buffalo and elsewhere yesterday evening, owing to the strike of the steel workers, with a considerable number of casualties. The police forces have been reinforced and New York State troops are being sent to Buffalo to preserve order at the Lackawanna Plant. The first agreement between the employers and strikers occurred at Martins Ferry, Ohio.

Reports Are Awaited

It is still impossible to ascertain the full scope of the strike. Undoubtedly labor has gained ground in the Western centers, but it is stated the strikers have made little headway in the Eastern sections.

BRITAIN IS FINISHING WORK OF MINE SWEEPING

Task Of Clearing Waters Of Explosives To Be Completed By End Of Month

(Reuter's Service)

London, September 24.—The official announcement that the Mine Clearance Service will cease at the end of November gives but little indication of the immense and dangerous labor involved in sweeping up the mine-fields in the neighborhood of the British Isles within a year of the Armistice.

All that now remains is the removal of the remnants of the huge mine-fields between the Shetlands and Norway and the remaining German mines off the Heligoland Bight.

Although the entire clearance of all mines laid is not claimed, sufficient routes for normal sea traffic are guaranteed. The task involved a close search of 40,000 square miles. A large proportion of the areas had to be covered twice and sometimes three times.

A very large percentage of the work was allotted to Great Britain and that was why the Mine Clearance Service was inaugurated.

At the end of August 19,000 British and German mines had been accounted for in home waters and 3,500 in the Mediterranean. Of 33,000 British mines laid in southern waters early in the war, it was found that only a very small proportion remained.

The men worked in the finest spirit, the official announcement states. Three minesweeping vessels were lost at home and two in the Mediterranean. On the other hand only six merchant vessels have been lost through striking mines since November, 1918.

The work of clearing waters allotted to Great Britain has now reached a stage when it is possible to fix the date of its termination, namely September 30 for home waters and November 30 for the Mediterranean.

Other places abroad are already clear.

The official statement adds that there will be the same danger from drifting mines so long as large minefields exist in the German area.

NEW KOREAN UPRISINGS EXPECTED BY JAPANESE

Reported To Peking Another Independence Movement Is Being Organised

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, September 23.—The Japanese report that the Koreans are attempting a second independence movement and say that a great number of them are gathering at Vladivostok and other convenient places near Korea for the formation of a "Dare-to-Die" party which is to commence its activities after the Mid-Autumn Festival. As a result of this the Japanese authorities have sent delegates to Civil Governor Kuo Chung-hsi at Kirin to express the wish that he instruct the Chinese authorities in his province to assist in putting down the Korean movement.

Governor Kuo reports to Peking that he has informed the Japanese that this is a question of great importance and that he cannot comply with their request without first referring the matter to his Government. The Government has received a similar report from Tuchun Pao Kuei-ching of Kirin and has ordered him to instruct the Chinese regimental commander at Yenchi to keep his troops ready for all eventualities.

Local Koreans who are in close touch with the affairs of their country say that they do not expect any further independence demonstrations by their countrymen at this time. They entertain hopes that a milder and juster regime will be established in Korea under Governor General Saito, and for the rest they are waiting until the League of Nations is prepared to hear their case.

SINO-AMERICAN COMPANY IS FORMED AT PEKING

New Corporation Will Import Steel Products And Export Chinese Goods

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, September 23.—Mr. O. D. Walker, formerly connected with the International Banking Corporation, of which he was Peking manager in 1917-1918, and Mr. Far T. Sung, a secretary in the Ministry of Finance and at one time connected with the now defunct Bank of Territorial Development, have formed a new Sino-American company known as the China-American Industrial Development Corporation. Half of the stock in this company, which is registered under Chinese law at the Ministry of Agriculture and Commerce, is held by the Liberty Steel Products Company, of New York, of which Mr. Walker is the representative in the Far East, and the other half is held by Chinese investors. Among the Chinese who are interested in the new company are ex-Presidents Li Yuan-hung and Feng Kuo-chang.

The President of the China-American Industrial Development Company is Mr. Wang Hou-tsai, of the Kailan Mining Administration and a leading member of the Tientsin Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Far T. Sung is one of the vice-presidents and manager of the company's head office in Peking. The company plans to import steel products of all kinds into China and to export from China to the United States hides, skins, furs, wool, soya beans and similar products.

'Forever After'

By Domino

And the prince and princess lived happily forever after. All good fairy stories end like that and I hope that none of us is too old to remember the sigh of absolute contentment that we had as kiddies when mother's story reached so logical and desirable a conclusion. Last night the Frawley Company presented just the prettiest and sweetest play that I have had the pleasure of seeing for many a long day. When the final curtain fell I experienced that same feeling of contentment that always followed those old stories told round the fireside.

"Forever After" was written by Owen Davis who has gained some reputation with his screen plays. Mr. Frawley told the audience that in the play to be produced it would be noticed that the author used some of the methods that are so often effectively engaged in the "movies." The story opens on the battlefield and a wounded soldier is unconsciously telling the story of his love for the girl he left behind him. At the end of each episode the actual scene is then presented with all the characters. And then comes the happy sequel.

It is a novel production in every way and was acted beautifully from start to finish. The big part fell to the lot of Rodney Hildebrand and Miss Claribel Fontaine. It was Hildebrand and Fontaine, or if you like Fontaine and Hildebrand. It doesn't matter which. They were both splendid. Because Hildebrand made the first appearance let me deal with him first. His opening scene gave the pace and tone to the whole play. As the wounded soldier he was most effective. Never once did he allow himself to become melodramatic and his sincere methods at once caught the sympathy of the whole house. It must have taken a good deal out of the actor to make the rapid transitions that the story called for but he never let the thing down for a moment and maintained the different roles to perfection. This is the biggest part that Mr. Hildebrand has so far been seen in and he is to be heartily congratulated upon his fine performance.

Miss Claribel Fontaine had to play the part of a girl who grew from sixteen to twenty or in other words from girlhood into womanhood. She was the most winsome of lassies and when she issued from college as the woman it was little wonder that more than one young fellow was ready and anxious to share his everything with her for all time. Miss Fontaine also had to portray every emotion that the sex is heir or heiress to. She was always good but it was in her gripping scenes that she took the audience by storm and simply commanded the rounds of generous applause that punctuated her fine work. Every other part in the play was subsidiary to these two leads but all the players put in their very best efforts with the result that the production was one of the smoothest the Frawleys have so far put on.

Mr. Henry Crosby calls for mention for an excellent little character part as "Mr. Clayton." Miss Leslie Virden was also seen to advantage as "Mrs. Clayton." Homer Barton did the little he had to do well, and not only did he make the audience smile when he appeared in that wonderful sweater which surrounded a more wonderful form, but he got an ovation with his speech in which he gave the girl to the other fellow and also promised to provide him with the wherewith-all to keep two in comfort. Miss Gloria Fonda, Mr. Herbert Farjeon, Mr. Frawley, Miss Fletcher, and Edward Harford all supplied acceptable little characters.

Tonight: "Forever After" will be repeated and it certainly has my very strongest recommendation. It is delightful.

DEMAND THAT PEKING STOP FOREIGN LOANS

Nine Local Bodies Ask For Publication Of Loan Agreements And Their Uses

Opposition to Peking's financing methods was expressed Thursday when nine local organisations demanded that the Northern Government halt further negotiations for foreign loans and make public all secret loans and their uses.

The organisations that despatched the telegram were the Educational Association of Kiangsu, Chamber of Commerce of Shanghai, the Educational Association of Shanghai, the National Vocational Education Association, the World Chinese Students' Federation, the Western Returned Students' Union, the Chinese Overseas Federation, the Shanghai Young Mens' Christian Association and the Association of Shanghai Fire Brigades.

The text of the message follows:

"The state finance is supported by the people. For this reason, the resolution of the budget, laws of taxation and currency, calling of loans, and contracts affecting national treasury is a power well defined in the Provisional Constitution. Since the dissolution of the last parliament, the Anfu Club has used the name to disguise itself for unscrupulous negotiations of foreign loans, selling national rights, and squandering the money for party funds. On one hand, the government has forgotten that these loans are liabilities of the national treasury, and on the other, the people have not been given the rights to perform the duty of supervising.

"As the result of a thorough discussion among the undersigned organisations, we hereby declare that, though reunion is much hoped for, it is not the desire of the whole nation to see the continuation of the present financial chaos, or, what is worse, a further increase of foreign loans, after reunion is reached. If the government has a heart of repentance, it would make known that, before the formation of a proper parliament which will perform the work of a supervisor of finance, no more foreign loans be concluded. At the same time, all secret loans and their uses in the years past be published as a proof of sincerity on the part of the government."

Robber Lures Victim By Appeal For Aid

In the view of Assessor Jones of the Mixed Court the act of decoying a woman out of her home with the story of a sick wife and then robbing her is especially mean and contemptible.

One Loo Kyah-khe, appeared yesterday on such a charge. The woman explained how the accused in a breathless state had asked her assistance and she had accompanied him through the dark to a lonely spot where other hands seized her and the accused took the gold hairpins from her hair. The next day she recognised him and had him arrested.

The man insisted that she had identified the wrong person but she was positive and her husband confirmed it. Loo was sentenced to three months in jail.

A copy of this treaty, ratified by China, has been forwarded to the Chinese Legation in Tokio, and the Chinese Charge d'Affaires has been instructed to exchange ratifications with the Swiss Minister to Japan.

It is understood here that the treaty provides that Swiss citizens shall receive the most favored nation treatment in China.

NOT DEAD, SAYS MR. BAHR

Mr. L. G. Bahr of Kiukiang writes plaintively to THE CHINA PRESS to say that he is not dead. He is not only alive but kicking—in both senses of that world. He objects to the fact that all the papers in Shanghai (except THE CHINA PRESS) announced the supposed fact that he had ended his life. He did not, he says, and doesn't intend to.

Nine defendants from one district and five from another appeared in the Mixed Court yesterday to answer the charge of keeping filthy premises within the Settlement. Individuals of the first group were fined one and two dollars each. In the second group, Sanitary Inspector Funclair pointed out that one was an especially bad offender and he was fined $4.

Discovery of a strange man upon the roof of a house in the early hours of the morning gives a strong presumption of intended burglary but it was held in the Mixed Court yesterday that some other proof is really needed to convict. The Chinese discovered in that suspicious position at 2 a.m. yesterday at 389 Peking Road was found to have returned to the Settlement without permission after having been expelled. The charge was changed to this latter offense and the accused was condemned on that charge to 18 months.

EXPECTED RAIN FALLS ON AMERICAN COMPANY

Dampness Does Not Cause Shift In Program, However; Two Speakers Tonight

Whenever and wherever a National Guard unit went into camp it rained. There never was a militia battalion in history whose members could boast that the tents were not wet during the encampment period.

At three o'clock yesterday morning the sky opened above the Rifle Range and several members of the American Company in camp were really wet before they awakened and closed the flaps. From private to officer, or should it be vice versa, it was figured good joss and it's all settled now. Rain tomorrow afternoon is impossible.

The downpour subsequently became a drizzle and then quit—and the campfire was held last night according to schedule with Captain S. A. Ransom speaking as advertised and the program ending with an impromptu company "sing." Captain Ransom expressed his pleasure at the turnout of men and the spirit displayed. He asked co-operation to make the unit's standard higher and urged an increase in membership.

Lieutenant Harry Ollerdessen, U.S.A., and Mr. E. P. Graham-Barrow, headmaster of the Cathedral School who recently returned from a trip to England and the United States, are to talk to the members of the company tonight.

Lieut. Ollerdessen will speak on experiences in United States Army training camps and Mr. Graham-Barrow is to give a talk on conditions in the United States and England. Jack Raynes and Private E. N. Heen will head the musical program which will be in the form of a company "sing."

Sunday night will be another big night in the mess hall. Lieutenant Baldwin, entertainment officer, announces an attractive vaudeville program to be headed by Mr. A. G. Loehr and Professor Lui, the magician.

The Guard Details

The second platoon was on guard from 7:15 o'clock yesterday morning until the same hour last evening when Lieutenant Olsen took his third platoon out to walk the beats. Lieut. Baldwin is in command of the second platoon and preceded Lieut. Olsen as officer of the day. T. C. Britton was sergeant of the guard last night.

Today Lieutenant Ashley will be officer of the day and the first platoon will be on guard with Sergeant Hanson in charge of the guard.

The shooting program starts this afternoon and will be continued tomorrow. The American Company cup shoot comes tomorrow and visitors to the camp tomorrow afternoon will see the last part of the shoot.

The program which starts today follows:

Event 1.—The "Officers'" (Four prizes).
Ranges 100, 300 and 600 yds.
Practices 1, 6 and 9 of annual musketry course.

Event 2.—The "N.C.O.S.'" (Four prizes).
Ranges 100, 300 and 400 yds.

Miss B. M. Murdock

Miss B. M. Murdock, who has been serving as a Methodist missionary in China, died at the Nanking Mission hospital early this week following an operation, according to a message that was received in Shanghai yesterday at the office of the treasurer of the Methodist Mission. Miss Murdock was formerly located in the province of Szechuen and recently has been a trained nurse in the Methodist hospital at Wuhu.

'Hearts Of The World'

If there is a fault to find with "Hearts of the World," shown at the Olympic Theater last night for the first time, it is that it follows too closely upon that other film masterpiece, "Intolerance." Of widely different themes, they are the two best cinema productions that have been executed from American studios within the year. "Hearts of the World," of the two is perhaps little the better.

The picture opens with Mr. D. W. Griffith, producer of the film, and Mr. Lloyd-George, British premier, shaking hands as testimonial to the fact that the scenes, for the most part, were taken within the British lines and by arrangement with the British Government. Staged by Americans, yet it is not an American play. It is predominantly British. What is not British is French. Primarily it is a love story, beautifully pictured. The war is but a background. Historically the picture has high merit. The scene showing the British House of Commons passing the resolution that declared war against Germany is given as genuine. It was taken with full knowledge that the scene was historic but with no thought, of course, that it would be used in such as setting as this. Equally authentic and of clear photography is the scene in the French House of Deputies taken under like circumstances of the nation declaring war.

The first four reels, after the prologue, deal with life in a simple French village. The hero is an English youth, the same as he who played "the boy" in "Intolerance." The heroine a French girl. Their romance and betrothal are shown and then the nation plunged in war. That a country worth living in is worth fighting for, is the sum-up given by the youth and he joins the French colors, even before his own nation of Britain has declared war. There follows a series of most realistic war films, rivaling if not surpassing the official Government war pictures. The village is taken by the Germans and its remaining citizens endure all the woes that French villagers endured from an arrogant captor. Later it is retaken and of course the hero and heroine are restored to each other and to happiness.

As a film it has never been surpassed in Shanghai. It is to be shown tonight, Sunday and Monday.

Run On Gold Shop; Exchange Still High

Reduction In Price Starts Heavy Buying; Banks Sell Exchange At 136 And 6/6

A run on gold shops caused by the lowering of the price to $24 per tael weight at a Native City shop and widely varying rates of exchange offered by the various banks kept the money market in a state of fluctuation yesterday. Rates on both London and America retained their strength and big amounts were sold at 136 on America and better than 6s. 6d. on London.

The run on the gold shops started yesterday morning when a new establishment near the East Gate sold gold at $24 a tael weight with the market calling for $27.50. Settlement shops were forced to lower their prices several times during the day and the lower the prices went, the heavier the buying was.

Before noon it was $26 in the Settlement and in the afternoon nearly all the shops asked $25 with some selling at $24.50, the price continued at the Chinese City shop all day.

ASK POWERS TO SUPPRESS ILLICIT OPIUM TRADE

Committees Are Appointed By Association At Peking To Make Investigations

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, September 23.—At a meeting of the Excutive Committee of the International Anti-Opium Association which was held today at the quarters of the International Press Club, it was decided to appoint two sub-committees of four members each, one for the purpose of investigating and reporting on violations of Chinese anti-drug regulations by foreign Powers, and the other to make a study and report of similar violations of these regulations by the Chinese officials and people.

The Association will, furthermore, send identical notes to the British, French and American ministers, for transmission to their respective governments, urging that each nation take up the suppression of the illicit traffic in drugs separately and without waiting for concerted action on the part of all the powers. Such joint action can be taken only after much time has been allowed to elapse for discussion and compromise; and the International Anti-Opium Association is of the opinion that the illicit traffic in drugs is a sufficiently serious menace to China to warrant its being acted upon by the various powers independently and without delay.

CHIN YUN-PENG SEEKS TO QUIT WAR MINISTRY

Believed Gen. Tien Chung-yu Will Be Chosen As His Successor

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, September 24.—General Chin Yun-peng has asked the President to relieve him of his duties at the Ministry of War. It is believed that General Tien Chung-yu will succeed him at the Ministry of War. The latter is a strong supporter of Tuan Chi-jui, but he is not a member of the Anfu Club.

It is understood that General Chang Chih-tan, Vice-Minister of War, will become Chief Secretary to the Cabinet, a post he held when Tuan Chi-jui was Premier. These changes indicate Tuan Chi-jui's greater control over the Government. Kung Hsin-chan has been offered the post of Adviser to the Presidency.

General Chin Yun-peng has telegraphed to the provinces that the military expenses as sanctioned by the Government will be paid early next month, but that the Government is unable immediately to make up arrears.

(China Press Correspondence)

Sungkiang, Ku., September 25.—For the first time, at least in my experience of over thirty years, an American gunboat, the Monocacy, came up the Whangpoo today as far as the creek that comes to Sungkiang. Commander Haight brought a squad of bluejackets to our town and caused quite a sensation in our little burg. He first called on the magistrate to pay his respects. He was received quite courteously by this official, who told him that he had already had notification of his coming on the day before. The magistrate sent for the chief of police and instructed him to take care of Commander Haight and allow him to see all that he wanted to.

The party came to the Methodist compound, where the bluejackets made a large wreath and then together with representatives of our community, a visit was made to General Ward's tomb, on which the wreath was laid with suitable ceremony. The chief of police had sent an escort of police to do honor to the party on their march to the tomb. The chief himself with his first assistant met us at the tomb. There was a photographer along and several pictures were taken. Altogether the whole affair formed a pleasant episode in our usually uneventful days and we will always be glad to have a visit from the American sailor boys.

The cholera seems to be subsiding; no cases have been heard of recently.

China Political Notes From Chinese Press

General Chin Yun-peng assumed the Premiership Thursday. He openly announced that he came to office only for a few days and no change in staff will be made for the time being. The service of Mr. Kuo Chi-yin as the Chief Secretary of the Cabinet is retained.

President Hsu Shih-chang has appointed Mr. Kung Hsin-chan as his high adviser and asked him to pay occasional visits to the Presidential office. Mr. Kung, however, does not intend to accept the appointment.

Following the return of Mr. Lu Chen-hsiang, Dr. Wellington Koo will be appointed Acting Chief Delegate to the Paris conference. A cablegram confirming the appointment has been sent by the Central Government.

The plan of General Chin and the President is to ask Mr. Wang Yi-tang to remain in Shanghai and wait. General Chin Yun-peng has telegraphed to Mr. Wang Yi-tang to say that no change will be made in the peace plans and Mr. Wang should do his utmost to hasten the opening of the Shanghai conference.

The Cabinet has decided to abolish the military review on the occasion of the National Independence Day. A reception will be held by the President and the Ministries and the conferring of orders and the extension of amnesty will take place.

The Government has consulted the Chamber of Commerce at Peking over the appointment of a delegate to the International Labor Conference. The Peking chamber proposes to ask the various chambers throughout the country to elect the representative.

According to a telegraphic report of Tuchun Yang Tseng-hsin of Sinkiang, Russian salt has been smuggled into his province. He asked that the Ministry of Foreign Affairs take up the matter with the Russian Minister.

Different suggestions have been made with reference to the disposal of the Boxer indemnity. The Government will call a meeting of the different interests to decide on the question. The return of Mr. Wu Ting-chang, the associate peace delegate, was for the purposes of conferring with the Government on the question.

The Peking notes of the government banks have fallen 52 percent below par value.

Sixteen translators of the Ministry of the Foreign Affairs have been assigned to the work of translating the German and Austrian peace treaties. They are given one month to complete the work.

All students in the South are in an uproar, following the arrest by the military government of over ten students who were caught in an attempt to scrutinise Japanese made articles. Crowds of students are demonstrating in front of the offices of the administration and demanding the release of the prisoners.

Charlie Chaplin Coming

Charlie Chaplin comes back to Shanghai next week in his widely heralded picture "Sunnyside," which opens at the Apollo theater Monday. In this, the third of Chaplin "million dollar" series, the popular comedian appears in a wholly new environment. In the story that is unfolded he is seen as a humble hired man on an American farm and the course of his love affair with the daughter of a neighboring farmer, his original procedure as a planter and caretaker of livestock, and the conflicts that arise between him and his practical employer afford full scope for all of Chaplin's peculiar talents. The production has been called one of the funniest the comedian has produced.

TIBETAN NEGOTIATIONS ARE NOT YET CONCLUDED

Szechuen Commander's Plan To Adopt Drastic Measures Is Not Favored

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, September 23.—The Tibetan question continues to occupy the attention of the Central Government, which now contemplates calling a meeting at Peking of the representatives of Chinese provinces contiguous to Tibet within the near future. In the meantime delegates will be despatched from here to conduct first-hand investigations along the Tibetan-Szechuen borders with a view to obtaining a thorough knowledge of the situation there as a basis for future negotiations with Great Britain.

General Hsiung Ke-wu, of Szechuen, who is in charge of the Chinese forces stationed along the Tibetan frontier, is urging the Government to adopt drastic measures in dealing with the Tibetans. He is of the opinion that an attack in force upon them will result successfully for the Chinese and that such a victory would obviate the necessity of further negotiations with Great Britain anent Tibet. It is understood here that in taking this stand General Hsiung is being influenced by the Japanese, who see in the prolongation of the Tibetan difficulty a cover for their own activities elsewhere in China, and who at the same time regard the Chinese difficulties along the Tibetan frontier as an excuse for keeping alive the Military Pact of 1918.

The Government is not, however, permitting itself to be influenced by the advice of General Hsiung and has given him no military instructions other than that he is to keep an alert but not an aggressive watch along the frontiers of Tibet. Indeed the Government is satisfied with the way that the negotiations with the British have progressed thus far and has every reason for hoping that further conferences will bring the entire issue to a satisfactory close.

Finally, in order to reassure the people as to the status of the negotiations and the good faith with which the British Minister is handling the situation, the Waichiaopu will shortly issue a pamphlet covering the whole question to date.

Old Cop's 'I Wish You Luck' Brings Fortune From Afar

Words of Cheer Spoken to Chinatown Tramp 17 Years Ago Recalled by Rich Man in Auto---And Caddell Is Going to Leave the Force for a Fine Job in West

New York, August 20.—Policeman Francis E. Caddell was at his station at the Manhattan end of the Brooklyn Bridge, where he has been answering questions for more than ten years, when a big gray touring car rolled up to the curb and stopped.

A man, who sat with two handsomely dressed women and a boy and a girl in the tonneau, beckoned to Caddell, and he went over quickly.

"Officer," the man said, "will this route we're taking get us to Coney Island?"

"It will," was the answer, with other directions added.

"You look as if you had come a long way," Caddell added, as the chauffeur prepared to start the auto.

"Yes, we have come from California, and now we are on the return trip. I didn't want the children to miss seeing Coney Island."

"That's fine," exclaimed Caddell heartily. "I hope you enjoy yourself, and I wish you luck."

The auto already was moving away when the big policeman uttered those words which really are the key to this unusual story.

"Stop! Back up!" the man called to the chauffeur, jumping from his seat at the same time. Turning to Caddell, he said in a tone of excitement:

"You weren't always on this job, were you, officer?"

"Oh, no," was the reply. "I've been a detective in the Tenderloin and in"——

"Chinatown?" the man amended. "In Chinatown about seventeen years ago?"

"That's right."

"Do you remember one day when you were standing with 'Chuck' Connors in front of Barney Flynn's saloon"——

"I couldn't very well forget 'Chuck'—old 'Pearl Buttons'—that's now dead and gone," Caddell interjected, nodding his head. "In my thirty-three years on the force I've known them, great and small, in this town."

"Do you remember," the man persisted, his voice rising and his eyes shining with emotion, "that you left 'Chuck' and walked over to a tramp, a ragged young fellow, standing in the doorway of Barney's and said to him:

"'What are you doing holding down a saloon doorway like that? Come on, now, you're too decent a young fellow to be hanging around here'?"

"Sure, I remember now," Caddell admitted. "The young fellow told me that he was a college graduate and that his father was wealthy"——

"And you told him to dry up with that stuff, that you were tired of hearing Chinatown pipe dreams," the man exclaimed, throwing his arm around Caddell's big shoulders, and squeezing him and pounding him on the back, and trying to drag him into the auto.

"I was the young fellow, officer. Meet my wife and my sister-in-law and my boy and girl. I'll never forget how you took me over to the old clothes market and bought me a suit and hat and shoes and underwear and"——

"Sure! A whole outfit for $2.75," Caddell grinned. "You'd hardly believe it today, would you? I stood you behind a truck and made you strip right there in the street and change your clothes."

"And you kept swaying back and forth to hide me while I was dressing in the clothes you bought me, and then you gave me $2.40 in cash, and the last words I heard you say were those same words you used when we were just about to go away just now: 'That's fine, I hope you enjoy yourself and I wish you luck.'

"That good luck call of yours has always stuck out in my memory, and when I heard it again today I was sure I had found the right man after all these years."

"I've given away lots of quarters and half-dollars and small change like that in my life," said the old policeman, whose reputation for honesty and clean living is a byword throughout the force, "but this is the first of all of them to have a comeback. It's a dream of mine come true."

The man (Caddell, with whom a reporter talked later in Caddell's home No. 201 McDonough Street, Brooklyn, refused to reveal the man's identity) then pulled out a bill fold and tried to repay Caddell. But Caddell wouldn't take any money—not even the $5.15. Then the man said.

"Well, I went home with the help of the start you gave me, and I went into the canning business with my father, and I have made a lot of money. I certainly have cleaned up. And I want you to come out to the Coast and I'll put you in charge of a plant or give you any position you want with me."

"I'm married and I have a family and a home in Brooklyn," Caddell replied.

"Bring 'em all with you," was the response. "You've got to do that much."

"We talked for a long time together after that," Caddell said to the reporter, "and the man wouldn't take no for an answer. And I think, after all, that when I get ready to retire from the department, it would be wrong for me not to accept the offer. Yes, I've been in the department now for thirty-three years, and I am entitled to retirement on pension at any time."

Caddell would not say when he intends to retire, but his face was still flushed with the excitement of the occurrence, and his blue eyes were dancing.

Electric Cooking

THE IDEAL METHOD.

The Electric Oven, being free from the fumes of combustion does not require to be ventilated, therefore food cooked in it retains its flavour, the natural gases from cooked meat are not carried away through flues but retained in the oven. A clear, uniform heat is maintained which has the effect of closing up the surface of meat or poultry, thus preventing loss by evaporation.

If You Want MILEAGE

Firestone

Non-Skid is the Answer

Mileage — Firestone factories are always working ahead of the times, never satisfied with even Firestone's best. Unusual freedom from tyre trouble, more comfort and easier riding are all part of this new improved tyre.

MORE Mileage — In Firestone Tyres there is an extra amount of cushion stock and more rubber between fabric layers. This means greater wear resistance, as each layer is protected imfrointernal friction.

MOST Mileage — Performance is proving the superiority of Firestone Tyres at every point, making your shilling go farther, because your tyres run longer by miles—and Miles—and MILES.

Banking Service with AMERICA —direct and personal

EXPORTERS or importers now engaged in, or thinking of, trade with America would do well to consider not only the special nature of our facilities, but also the personal interest we take in every one of our customers' transactions.

First of all, we offer direct banking service—without intermediary dealings, or unnecessary delays.

Equally important is our personal service. Every transaction is followed through, both here and in America, by our own representatives with a personal interest, the value of which is evident in the service rendered.

May we talk with you about America?

Cotton Market

Messrs. A. B. Rosenfeld and Son write as follows in their report dated September 27:

China Cotton.—Throughout this week the market displayed a steady tendency with a net advance of one tael and a quarter during the early part of the week. At the close, however, the tendency was on the easy side.

The chief feature of the week was the fairly large volume of buying by bulls, who were encouraged by the firm attitude of up-country holders in spite of the brilliant weather we are having, basing their calculations on a dozen or more crop estimates foreshadowing a yield well below last year's, to which the relative smallness of receipts lent color. During the course of the next week there will be further contributions to the crop literature, so that the market should have well discounted the previous estimates. At the close of the week the bears have reversed the position, and in our opinion the only hope for the bulls is that if they are backed by sufficient cash and paper profits they may carry the advance further.

From a legitimate point of view, we hardly think that the time is propitious for a bull campaign this early in the season under present existing conditions, what with Spinners holding off and export impossible on account of exchange. Disregarding for the time being the possibilities of intermediate fluctuations which may be involved in the question as to whether the supply will become available for spinning purposes when required, the present outlook seems to offer no foundation for the expectation of higher prices in the long run.

Messrs. J. Spunt and Co. write as follows in their weekly report:

China Cotton.—Following upon the issue of our last report the steadiness in spots continued during the earlier part of the week firming up at the close in sympathy with the successive advances in Mid-Americans.

While picking has been in progress under favorable conditions for some time past, the receipts from the interior marts have, however, in no way been commensurate with the quantity thus far harvested and prices for Cotton for future deliveries showed an ever hardening tendency throughout the week under review. From rumors circulated in the trade it would appear that a withholding movement on the part of the farmers is being contemplated with a view to creating more favorable rates for the staple and if a realisation of such circumstances should take place it remains to be seen if the results expected will materialise in face of the very meager exports to Japan brought about by the high rates of exchange now being experienced. Tone of the market, steady.

Tenders for the supply of S. A. Forms.

Tenders are invited for the supply of the annual requirements of certain forms for station use. A schedule of the forms in question, giving full particulars of the quantities, sizes and qualities of paper required, can be obtained on application to the undersigned.

2. It is to be clearly understood that the quantities to be supplied as mentioned in the schedule are only estimated quantities. The actual requirements may vary from the estimates. Quantities largely in excess of specified requirements may unexpectedly be found necessary, and must be supplied during the term of the contract at the rates given in the accepted tender or tenders.

3. The prices of all forms must be quoted in dollar currency as accepted locally.

4. Each contract will be in force for a period of 1 year commencing from the 1st December, 1919.

5. Sealed tenders marked "Tenders for S.A. Forms" must be sent to the undersigned not later than 3 p.m. on the 6th October, 1919, at which time all tenders received will be opened.

6. The Chinese Government Railways do not bind themselves to accept the lowest or any tender. They also reserve the right to accept any tender in part only.

7. A deposit to safeguard the faithful execution of the terms of the contract will be required before an order is placed with the successful tenderer or tenderers. The amount will be determined at the time of placing a contract. The deposit will not exceed 10% of the total estimated value of the forms to be supplied by the Contractor.

8. The working proofs of the forms must be submitted to the person authorized to deal with them, and be approved by him before they are struck off.

9. No modifications in the size or quality of paper specified for each form or in the style of type used in the specimen copies, must be made, except with the consent of the proper authority, previously obtained in writing. Forms supplied in contravention of this proviso will be rejected at the expense of the Contractor.

10. All supplies must be delivered in equal half-yearly instalments to each Railway concerned, before the 15th December, 1919, and 15th June, 1920 respectively. Supplies must be packed and sent to each Railway concerned direct by the Contractor.

11. It is to be understood that the sending in of a tender is to be construed as an acceptance of all the above stipulations.

The Senate And The Peace Treaty

THE petition which has just been submitted to the United States Senate urging that body, unconditionally and without delay to ratify the Treaty of Peace, is a timely action which may be interpreted as meaning that the country at last is awake to the perils created by the long and often aimless debate on the Treaty. According to the cablegram the signatories include former President Taft, former Attorney General Wickersham, Mr. Samuel Gompers, the President of the Federation of Labor; Mr. Natham Strauss, former Commissioner of Labor and Ambassador to Turkey; Mr. Jacob Schiff, the banker, editors of influential magazines such as the Outlook, World's Work, and Independent, presidents of State Universities, a large number of well-known educationists, financiers, business men, State Governors, Mayors, inventors, including such names as Mr. Thomas Edison and Mr. Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone; religionists, well-known women, labor representatives and others.

The petition states that the speedy restoration of peace is absolutely necessary to save the country from the prevailing unrest, and that in case the amendments and reservations recommended by the committee be passed the re-opening of the Peace Conference will be necessitated.

The petitioners, says the cablegram, recognise that the Shantung amendment is most reasonable though it will have no practical value. "The best course to be adopted under the circumstances will be to bring the League of Nations into existence so that China may be induced to bring forward the Shantung question in the League council with the assistance of America."

The Shantung amendment relates to the action of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations in voting that the former German rights in Shantung should revert to China instead of to Japan. Should the whole body of the Senate adhere to this recommendation a situation would be created that would lead to the reopening of the Peace Conference and the precipitation of a new international crisis.

The present petition has been pressed upon the Senate in support of President Wilson's position. On both domestic and foreign grounds the President has been urging immediate ratification. He has asserted that the delay in the Senate is largely responsible for the industrial unrest of which the latest example is the steel strike. He has pointed out that the plans of all the great foreign trade corporations are being held up and the markets for raw materials adversely affected. "Full, normal, profitable production waits upon peace," is the way he has expressed it, adding that our army and navy plans, also are being held up.

"Without determinate markets," he said, "our production can not proceed with intelligence or confidence. There can be no stabilisation of wages because there can be no settled conditions of employment. There can be no easy or normal industrial credits because there can be no confident or permanent revival of business."

In President Wilson's opinion, "every element of normal life among us depends upon and awaits the ratification of the Treaty of Peace," and,

"We can not afford to lose a single summer's day by not doing all that we can to mitigate the winter's suffering, which, unless we find means to prevent it, may prove disastrous to a large portion of the world, and may at its worst bring upon Europe conditions even more terrible than those brought by the war itself."

In response to a question which had been submitted to him by a Senator, President Wilson said with all the emphasis of which he was capable that the consummation of peace depended solely upon the Senate's action, for he believes that he himself has no power to declare the existence of peace by a proclamation, nor would he under any circumstances issue such a proclamation. It would, in his belief—

"Put a stain upon our national honor which we could never efface, if, after sending our men to the battle-field to fight the common cause, we should abandon our associates in the war in the settlement of the terms of peace and dissociate ourselves from all responsibility with regard to those terms."

The President's present "circle tour" of the country explaining the terms of the League Covenant and Peace Treaty is part of his program to force action in the Senate and the petition just submitted will go a long way towards convincing that body that the country will not brook much further delay.

The country, as we pointed out the other day, is ten to one in favor of the League of Nations and the Treaty of Peace, and being so, is anxious to shove the thing through and get on with the important matter of straightening out its domestic affairs.

The Noh-Drama's Lessons For Western Opera

By James H. Cousins
(Japan Advertiser)

Years ago in Ireland, I used to spend all the spare cash I had, and occasionally some that I hadn't, in haunting theaters at which grand opera was being played. I heard everything that was to be heard, from cheap and nasty "executions" of Verdi's verdiest by amateurs, to superb interpretations of Wagner's great trilogy of the Ring.

A friend who knew my weakness, with wonderful tact said once in my hearing that grand opera was not an art at all, and even if it was, it was played out. I met his statement with the conclusive counter-statement of my approval of a recent newspaper declaration that the world's greatest need was an increased supply of lunatic asylums—especially for people who went about spreading artistic folly.

Since then I have done something in the way of play-writing, producing and acting; I have spent four years close to the literature and drama of India; and I have seen the Japanese Noh-drama and the more or less "legitimate."

And once again I have seen grand opera; and I have been wondering what is wrong with it or with me or whether my foolish friend of fifteen years ago was not as wise a man as his shiny bald head indicated that he might have been.

The wondering began with the stage comportment of the performers last week at the Imperial Theater. I have been asking myself for twenty-four hours (night time included) how it comes about that every little turn of action in a Noh-play is full of some queer overhanging significance, while hardly a gesture or movement in the grand opera the other night did not irritate me.

I think I have found an indication of the answer to my wonder in my foolish friend's first statement that grand opera is not an art at all. It is a mongrel affair—pictures trying to sing, music trying to paint its face.

Why, then (I have asked myself), not have the same feelings over the Noh-drama? It has scenery, and music, and action. True, I reply to myself, but these things are reduced to a state of ceremonial simplicity and unity, with the end in view of producing by suggestion a single artistic impression. The scenery is a painted pine tree on a back wall, where no pine tree would allow itself to be discovered—but it gives you that pinetree feeling. The accessory music is a beat on a drum, a strain on a flute, a vocal cry. The actors chant after the manner of the Gregorian mode, only more so, and move like beings in another spatial dimension. When a man has to be killed, he retires from the stage, that is to say the actor takes his personality "off," and leaves only the dramatic memory; and a symbolical death-thrust is given to the space that the actor left. One such killing on a Noh stage restored to me the dignity of dramatic death, after Oscar Asche's smothering of Lily Brayton on a bed (that I had seen in many another play) not only murdered Desdemona, and Othello as well, but almost slew Shakespeare in my mind, and prepared me to give a hearty assent to the exclamation of an American professor (on seeing a Japanese ordinary play for the first time, and making a lightning comparison)—"Aren't we cows!"

The Surprise Of The Mask

The Noh-play also puts a mask over the vagaries of expression in the barefaced drama. The single characteristic expression of the character is always "in the picture," and I was surprised to find how powerful, and how lacking in an anticipated monotony, was this use of the mask.

That may be what some people call art, I say to myself, but it isn't life. And that, I think, is just the point. We are constantly mixing up these quite different functions of the human ego, and so tying our thoughts in knots. Art is art, and life is life. There are subterranean connection between them of course. Art that is untrue to the great basic principles of life and nature is not true art. Life that is not lived artistically, that is, in line with the great fundamentals of beauty and symmetry and repose, is not true life. But we make a mistake when we try to shove the one down the other's throat.

Life And Stage Life

You cannot put "life" on the stage, for then the stage will cease to be a stage, and will simply be a piece of life three feet or more higher than the rest, and paid for. If you put life on the stage the actors will have to cease being actors. They will have to forget that glittering "down-house" stare, the "off-leg" entrance—the hundred and one tricks that no one (not even an actor in mufti) performs in real life.

And we cannot bring the stage into life, for life (the definition is not mine) "is one damned thing after another" (incidentals included), while the art of the stage is one (at present unfortunately undamned) thing on top of another reaching up to a "picture" at the "curtain"—even if common logical and artistic decency have to be outraged, as on the night of my visit to the grand opera, by dragging back two characters whose dramatic business was elsewhere.

Grand opera as ordinarily mounted and acted, is a checkerboard affair of life and art; and as each bites the other's tail, they are mutually destructive. It adopts the convention of singing, instead of plain speech—which would be all right if it was consistently conventional. It has to move, but its natural step is dragged after the convention of music into a strut and a jerk. It has painted pillars—and real chairs and tables; it has simulated glass in its windows—and actual candles throwing actual light on, not through, the glass.

Unreal Realism

You cannot have realism and convention running in double harness They belong to an entirely different order of consciousness. One crawls along the surface of the earth; the other flies above the earth and sees it generalised on the flat so to speak. You might as well try to marry a jinricksha to a balloon; it couldn't be done even if the former tried to lift itself by inflating its price, as it always does, at grand opera.

Neither can you have realism on the stage; I mean honest, unblushing, complete realism. The more "real" it is, the less it is art. You can have, of course, that queer piebald thing called realistic drama, which is only convention spotted over with smells.

What, then, I ask myself, is left? Convention? Quite so. And it is the conventional arts (the arts that make detail subservient to a co-ordinating idea) that have been and are the living arts. The great age of the Greek drama was the age of masks and conventionalised scenery—or rather lack of scenery. Shakespeare was born on bare boards. He could not have come to life with Herbert Tree as nurse. He would have been smothered in the gorgeous swaddlings of His Majesty's Theater. Stratford needn't worry about the proposed smoky industries interfering with the repose of the Bard of Avon. Only his dust is there (if it is there), and he must smile at the pother made about that, when his soul has been hounded from the earth by the perpetrators of revivals—"with dresses and scenery of unparallelled magnificence, and Mr. . . . . and Miss . . . . . , the great stars, in the chief roles."

Yes, we cannot see the sky for stars. We cannot see the play for the players. We cannot see the real inner visionary "scena" within our own being, because of the imitated, vulgar "scenery" that shouts to the outer eye and blinds the inner.

It was in the convention, the ritual, of the drama of old that its power and life lay—Grecian, Indian, Japanese—and that power and life can only be touched again when we return to convention.

So I don't agree with my foolish friend after all that grand opera is played out. It is not played at all. It is sung, mounted, puffed, but it is not interpreted. Every actor and actress has his and her idea of a particular part. There is practically no taking of thought as to what is the idea of the whole. The old actors put on masks in order to suppress their own personalities, and let the play be "the thing." We have discarded the mask—the "persona"—and we stick our personalities in front of ourselves and in front of the play—even as we stick our little egotisms in front of the great play of life and obscure the vast human purpose of the Master-Dramatist.

I have a vague hope that some Japanese members of the audience who smiled audibly at some things in the grand opera this week, will see to it that, when Japan takes up, if it does that form of expression, she will put the music and the story to the accompaniment of plain suggestive scenery, and simple indicative gestures, and banish the stick-waggers and fire-flies in front of the stage to the Hades where Richard Wagner rightly sent them under the stage. Already she is ages beyond the West in her native drama in the absence of the horrible habit of smacking one's palms together, and in giving no countenance to that other pander to personal vanity, the lifting of the curtain at the end of a scene or act in order to allow the atmosphere of the play to be smashed to pieces.

War-Prostrate Servia

Servia's frightful toll of victory is sometimes overlooked in the general amazement and sorrow produced by the terrible losses in personnel and material inflicted on all the Allied countries invaded by the enemy. But without seeking to minimise the sufferings of other peoples, it must be urged that the story of Servia is the most tragic of all. This is the contention of Mr. Crawfurd Price, editor of The Balkan Review (London), who avers that unless the Allies force Servia's particular adversaries, Austria, Hungary, and Bulgaria, to pay their debts to her up to he maximum limit, it will be necessary to wipe off a considerable portion of her liabilities in Britain, France, and America. He does not go so far as to second the suggestion put forward on behalf of Portugal to the effect that the great Powers should cancel the debts owing to them by the smaller states who have assisted them to win the war, but claims there is obviously room for the sympathetic consideration of the financial dilemma in which the little nations, and particularly Servia, find themselves today. When attacked by Austria-Hungary in July, 1914, we are reminded, Servia was in an already enfeebled condition, for only six months had elapsed since the demobilisation of the army after the two victorious efforts in 1912 and 1913, and the country had scarcely begun to pull itself together materially and financially before it was again called upon to defend its frontiers. Hospitals and medical stores were hopelessly inadequate, and thousands of men perished as the result of the first Austrian attack, whose lives might have been saved had the proper facilities been available. In the winter of 1914, moreover, came the outbreak of typhus, introduced into the country by Austrian solders who had been contaminated by contact with Russian prisoners, and we are told that if the 350,000 deaths among the civilian population be added to the deaths in the army from the same cause, it will be found that "approximately 10 percent of the entire population of Servia was wiped out by the plague. Another 10 percent of the population succumbed to famine and fatigue on the march to the Adriatic in the historic retreat across the mountains of Albania, which was the sequel of the attack in the autumn of 1915 on the north and west by Austro-German armies and on the east by the Bulgarians. From the end of 1915 until the autumn of 1918, we are reminded, Servia was occupied by the enemy. One-third of the territory was subjected to Austro-Hungarian domination, while the other two-thirds had the additional misfortune to find themselves temporarily under Bulgarian rule. Mr. Price marks a nice distinction between varieties of barbarians, namely, that in Belgium the Germans thought to "exploit the Belgian population," but the object of the Bulgarians and Austro-Hungarians in respect of the Serbs was "to exterminate them." Mr. Price points out further that:

"The casualties among the army in killed and missing alone reached the appalling total of 402,435, or approximately 50 percent. When we come to examine the losses among the civil population, the figures available present an even more alarming aspect, for the civilian dead are reckoned at 845,000, of whom no less than 311,000 were males over the age of fifteen. Thus the total losses, apart from wounded who recovered and prisoners who returned from captivity, amount to 1,247,435, or not less than 28 percent of the total population in Servia. . . . .

"For five years Servia has been practically deprived of internal revenue. Her country has been devastated beyond description. She has no cattle, implements, or seed-corn; her import and export trade has ceased; her few industries have been ruined; her workpeople are living at the expense of the state. What little money she possesses in the interior is represented by Austrian and Bulgarian paper currency forced upon the population at its face value and now practically worthless. She is deprived of the wherewithal to inaugurate the most pressing works of reconstruction—as a case in point, there is no available means even of replacing the shattered windows in the houses at Belgrade."

"One leads where many follow."

Tennis Tradition And Popularity

There was a time when lawn tennis was considered an exclusive game, the sport of the idle rich, something past the understanding and therefore beneath the contempt of the average athletic fan. That period has completely faded into oblivion, and tennis is today conversely in danger of being over-popularised, if such a thing be possible. It has already been proved that more people, the world over, play or try to play tennis than the wildest total of devotees that any other sport can legitimately claim. As a spectacle, also, the game is growing to such proportions that the number of spectators at important tournaments is beginning to suggest even the crowds drawn by such popular sports as baseball and racing. And herein lies a problem which is already making its presence felt.

The traditions of tennis demand that the spectator be an absolute neutral so far as the match is concerned, an emotionless, unprejudiced, unopinionated automaton, trained to applaud at the proper time, but forbidden to express his feelings beyond the precincts of strict decorum. The ruling of an official is never to be questioned; an error on the part of a player is never to be greeted with partisan enthusiasm; no act or sound shall ever intrude upon the silent concentration which is the contestants' due. Tennis, says tradition, is to be a gentleman's game, no matter how many animal instincts have to be curbed in the process of keeping it so.

All this is right and proper. But inevitably, as tennis grows more and more popular and as it appeals more and more to those who are fundamentally ignorant of its traditions and its etiquette, it will be subjected to the rough familiarity and intimate partisanship which are the very life-blood of our national game. A striking example of this occurred in staid, well-behaved Boston. The spectators refused to accept one of the decisions in the challenge match for the Longwood Bowl, and the howls and protestations were enough to make one believe that "Take him out!" "Oh, you robber!" and "Kill the 'ump!" were already waiting in the not far distant future. In this particular case, the umpire very properly upheld the questioned decision, and the profiting player, William M. Johnston, with equal grace, declined to accept the advantage. But this by no means atoned for the "rooting" propensities of the bleacherites. Such rowdyism must be nipped in the bud, or the prestige of tennis, built up through centuries of true aristocracy among games, will become a mere memory, a formless shadow of vanished significance.

The National Tennis Umpires' Association, of which Edward C. Conlin is chairman, should make it a special feature of its activities to see that the gallery at all important tournaments is kept in order. If ignorant or wilfully disorderly spectators insist upon interfering with the decisions and interrupting the proceedings on the court, it should not be a difficult matter to eject the offenders. A few test cases, vigorously prosecuted, might do wonders in establishing a standard of behavior for future tennis galleries. Popularity is desirable, but let it not be purchased at the sacrifice of traditions which have become practically unique in the annals of sport.

Movies Of The Weather

One may now watch the development and progress of a great storm, or of a cold wave, on the moving-picture screen. The films used for the purpose are not pictures of the storm itself, but of successive weather-maps of it, like those prepared by our Weather Bureau. The spectator sees a low-pressure area arise, expand, and move across the continent, as he watches, on the screen, the movements of the curves of equal air-pressure on the map. It is claimed that this method of representation, invented recently by a French meteorologist, will be a great aid to the study of weather conditions, and that interesting facts regarding the general circulation of the atmosphere have already been deduced by its aid. Now that aerial navigation has become an accomplished fact, this circulation will soon have a practical bearing on commerce, even greater than it possessed in the days of the sailing-ship. Of late its use has been limited to weather-forecasts. We translate below the significant parts of an article contributed to La Naturi (Paris) by Jacques Boyer. Says this writer:

"The atmosphere, as is well known, is the seat of great circulatory movements, knowledge of which forms the basis of weather forecasts.

"To determine these movements, each weather station makes diagrams whose results are condensed into the weather maps now familiar to most of our readers. These maps show the curves of equal atmospheric pressure over an extended region—Europe, for example.

"The curves change their shape daily according to certain laws that are not easily revealed by usual methods. It is necessary to compare the successive maps of the whole region in question, to be able to draw conclusions regarding its atmospheric circulation.

"Unfortunately the consultation of numerous maps, one after the other, is not without difficulty. Therefore, Mr. Garrigou-Lagrange conceived the idea, some time ago, of reducing them to convenient form and superposing them in a sort of book whose leaves could easily turned.

"He presented a certain number of these pocket zootropes, with a note on their use, at the international meteorological congress of 1900. Later he thought of the plan of photographing the maps, one after the other, on a moving-picture film, so that they could be thrown on a screen before an audience. He dropped these preliminary experiments, not having then a sufficiently clear method of representation nor a sufficiently numerous series of situations, to give the impression of actual movement.

"The war gave an opportunity of taking up the question again, with the aid of the new data collected by the weather service attached to the General Headquarters staff, and with the kind assistance of the director of inventions. On its part, the Paris Academy of Sciences gave him an appropriation for constructing the apparatus that he had devised. In general appearance this resembles the cinematographs in present use; the only difference is in the relative disposition of the two reels. The object of the device is, as noted above, to be able to turn it back as often as desired in order to be able to examine any part of the film that has been shown, on its first passage, to possess special interest. Now in ordinary moving-picture apparatus the film can not be turned back, the lower reel alone having a motor and the upper one being free.

"The gear invented by Mr. Garrigou-Legrange enables either of the reels at will to be turned by motor, the other being freed at the same time. . . . . .

"By exhibiting his cinematograph on March 24, 26, and 28 last, in the Physical Research Laboratory of the Sorbonne, to a large number of professors and scientific men, Mr. Garrigou-Lagrange showed what a part it might play in meteorological study.

"Two of the series of maps already filmed, one of Europe, the other of America, place in evidence a movement of the highest interest. They show, in fact, that the low-pressure centers in these cases move along a trajectory, sometimes, to the north of the 60th parallel, sometimes south of the 30th, so that the atmosphere seems to experience a sort of respiration over the regions in question. These phenomena thus follow a fairly clear law of periodicity, which, it is to be noted, recalls the analogous relations pointed out by Poincare in the case of the displacement of certain winds. Generally speaking, above the 30th parallel as well as below it, but with less clearness, the moon acts by drawing vast regions of the atmosphere into general movements.

"However this may be, the turn-back system applied by Mr. Garrigou-Lagrange to his picture-machine will find other applications in the teaching of science by cinematography. The mechanism may also be adapted to all picture-machines, of whatever power, and in case of exhibition before a large audience Mr. Garrigou-Lagrange has invented a device that enables him to stop the film without injury to it from the intense heat of the lighting system.

"Finally, the length of the films may be considerably reduced. We can, for instance, make up bands of different films fastened together, on such different subjects as natural history, geography, industry, astronomy, or medicine.

"These fragments, only a few yards long, will present to an audience the life of an animal or a plant, the evolution of a star, the different phases of a manufacture or of any other phenomenon whatever, just as collections of 'selected pieces' give an idea of works of literature or history. The cinematograph will then have all the qualities required to play a greater and greater part in scientific instruction, and in education of all degrees—higher, secondary, and primary."

FAMOUS ARMY DOUGHNUT RESULT OF AN ACCIDENT

Head Of War Workers Explains Only Stove Available Had Mere One-Pie Capacity

New York, August 25.—The story of how the Salvation Army doughnut first happened to be made in France was told yesterday at Army Headquarters, No. 122 West 14th Street, by Col. William S. Barker, who commanded the Salvation Army in France. He returned last Sunday on the steamship France. He will leave immediately for the West.

"It was at Demange, in the summer of 1917," began Col. Barker, "that I met Gen. George B. Duncan, commanding the 1st Brigade, 1st Division, and was invited to dine with him. We had a wonderful dinner cooked by a French chef and it certainly tasted fine, down to the dessert. But the dessert was a French apple pie, about a quarter of an inch thick and perfectly flat. I promised Gen. Duncan that when my workers came over he should have a real American pie, and he held me to the promise.

Stove Space Forced Doughput

"As I went about the battlefields observing the doughboys I found them everywhere thinking of home and the things of home, and it seemed to me that one service they would most appreciate from us would be some homemade pie. So I told Adjutant Margaret Sheldon to make an apple pie for Gen. Duncan and a big patch of other pies for the men.

"She, however, found difficulty in obtaining a suitable stove. The first she could get was only about twelve inches square and two feet high, a stove that would bake only one pie at a time. And that was how it happened to occur to her to make doughnuts. For doughnuts can be fried in a big kettle over any kind of a fire. I have seen soldiers standing three hours in the rain, long sticks in their hands, to fork them from the fat.

"Of course, the Salvation Army did not confine its efforts to cooking doughnuts alone. Perhaps you did not know we had a general reputation for our flapjacks also. Ensign Fred Anderson of Seattle was our flapjack specialist. It was not always possible to obtain the materials for doughnuts, and Anderson used to make griddle cakes. His first griddle was made out of a sheet of iron laid over a fire built in a metal wheelbarrow. He used to tramp fifteen miles or more among the peasants to buy eggs, which he also fried upon his griddle."

Only 245 Went From Here

There was never at any one time more than 176 Salvation Army workers from America in France, Col. Barker said. The number that went over from here altogether was 245. This number was augmented to 500 or 600 by French workers and details from the military forces. Col. Barker sailed in May, 1917. His first group of workers numbered seven, four men and three women. The initial fund for the work was $25,000, subsequently raised to $1,000,000 by public subscription.

Only two small units of the Salvation Army remain at work in the battle area. One is at Brest and expects to finish its work this month. The other, consisting of twenty-five persons, is with the Army of Occupation in Germany.
